SAI DHARMAM

SAI AROUND THE WORLD

Sai devotees are all around the world. We are all different but share the same teachings from Swami. His teachings and messages are universal and can be followed anywhere. There are different centers around the world under the name of Sai. I go to Cooksville Sai Center and have met a lot of amazing individuals who have shared the same connection I have with God. The teachings we learn are absorbed into our minds and are used throughout life. Although we are in one location, there are so many more in Canada, India, Sri Lanka, France, London, and more. We are all in different locations but share the same teachings and learning opportunities. Sai Baba's students follow the same values: love, peace, truth, non-violence, and right conduct. No matter where we are in the world, Swami's teachings are still the same and followed the same. Along with his values, but as well as his conducts. As a student of Swami's, I follow his conduct and his teachings and use them throughout my life as a source to look back to. I know other students around the world feel the same way towards his lessons as they do affect our lives. Proven, Swami's teachings are used world wide and are effective in any area.

DEVOTEE SPEAKS

Getting the opportunity to travel as a young female was something I never imagined would become a reality. The miraculous ways that Swami aided in this journey to break all the obstacles I faced assured me that this experience was something I must go through in my journey of life. As expected, feelings of weariness, fear, and hesitancy crossed my mind as I thought about living in another country for a long period of time. Being known as an optimistic person, these feelings were not typical. I vividly remember these feelings as they periodically clouded my thoughts throughout my entire journey as I reached my destination. I landed during the daytime and immediately went to search for some homely food (after having some unappetizing airplane dinners). I found myself at an Indian restaurant near my new residency. I walked towards the cashier, and I immediately notice the picture in front of me. Swami smiled in his orange robe in a picture frame on the wall of the restaurant. I immediately felt a wave of relief and comfort as this ringed in my head: “Why fear when I am here?” After this moment, the feelings of fear barely crossed my mind. I knew this was where I was supposed to be. The opportunity to do this gave me perspective as to how Swami’s values and messages have no boundaries. Love all, Serve all; a message universal to everyone and applicable to everywhere. Coming in contact with people of different ethnicities and occupations, even in cases when language may have been a barrier, the common theme of helping others and doing that with love was universal. His message truly crosses every border, as these values are not only applicable to his devotees but are applicable to everyone. They are in fact human values.

SEVA GLOBALLY

After reading an article on Radio Sai, I have realized Seva is not only done in India but it is done in different countries across the globe. For instance Zambia, a country in Africa, is in devastating conditions. Children are living their lives without good food or shelter. Many of Zambia’s children live life as orphans. These children are not getting the care that they need. Now thanks to Seva, children are getting a periodic distribution of not only food, but necessities like soap and toothpaste. In the winter, all the children receive a blanket. During the distribution, kids cheer loudly as a sign of gratitude to this show of kindness. Additionally, in Mexico at a place near the beach is usually a place for fun and sunshine, not litter or garbage. The world was given to use to live and we need to keep it as pure as possible. Sai youth don’t only play at the beach, but they clean it! A group of twenty or so collect about 40 bags of rubbish during the weekends and leave them at a designated area for garbage trucks to pick them up on Monday mornings. This is the mindset that humanity needs. Leprosy is a disease that can be cured. The problem is that many have the mindset that touching these people is dangerous. Sai Seva has cured many people and is now not only giving those people medicine, but also food as a token of Swami’s love. People in Kenya are helping their little brothers and sisters through Educare. People are imagining that rendering services consists of distributing food, running medical camps and more but that is not entirely so. They do give food and clothes. Now Seva is teaching kids that live is not only about education, but is also about characters and the five human values. Now that technology has come, all the world cares about is the future. This generation is not treasuring what was done in the olden times. In fact, elderly citizens are the sole cause of why we have the technology today. People are forgetting to tend to the needs of their elders. Luckily, Seva has helped these people and people are now doing all the little things to show how much they appreciate what the elders have done for us. Across the globe,

Seva is done differently compared to what we normally see, but there is one thing in common, each service is done from love.
